HUNGKONG OFFICE: 14. DES VŒUX ROAD CL. LONDON OFFICE: 131, FLEET STREET, E.C.

Honokong, 22nd November, 1902.

For the past three weeks the city of Victoria has been on intermittent water supply, and as a natural consequence (for so we must call it) a certain number o inhabitants have been deprived of all water except such as they can procure by sending out for it or fetching it themselves. It may betaken that the intermittent system will be continued henceforward up to next year's rains, and that those unfortunale people whose pipes the water is unable to reach will be obliged until the rains to get their supply from outside. We need not here dwell upon the fact, to which attention has. so frequently been called of late, that the rainfall for January Odober, 1902, was no less than eight inches above the average for Water Return was published in our issue of ye-terday showing the levels and storage of water in the reservoirs on this island on the 1st instant. As the figures may have escaped the attention of some of our readers

Total..... 276,137,000 353,960,000 Looking at the October Water Return, we find that there was on the 1st October, last a total of 439,981,000 gallons in storage, made up of 359,010,000 gallons at Tytam, 159,980,000 at Pokfulam, and 20,991,000 at 1 cheong, which was then 7 feet 9 inches below overflow, is now returned as completely exhausted, while Tytam has lost 46,400,000 gallons and Pokfulam 18,630,000 gallons. The average consumption per head of population remained in November as in October, that is 18.3 gallons per head, while the population of Victoria and the Hill district was 216,000 on the 1st instant as against 215,600 the previous month. As it depends on the effect of the curtailed supply we will not attempt to work out the question of how long our present.

supply is calculated to last. It was charged against the European community by our junior evening contemporary two days ago that their apathy in motters of public interest (such as the water question) contrasts ill with the public spirit shown by the Chinese community. Incidentally remarking that it is rather curious to find the Telegraph speaking of "our" apathy, when that journal is owned by the Chinese and is generally understood to represent Chinese opinion in Hougkong. we do not coasider that the European residents here can fairly be called apathetic in the matter of the water supply. Our Chinese fellow-townsmen have no doubt done well for the uselves in pressing forward a scheme for an auxiliary water-pipe system, in the place of meters, and they will benefit if the scheme can be carried out. But this has nothing to do with improving the actual storage-capacity, for water in Hongkong, which is the point of the whole matter. Public spirit alone will not calarge the reservoirs any more than apathy will contract them. The only way in which | public spirit can be directed, with success toward the solution of the difficulty is by keeping constant pressure upon the Government until it takes the necessary steps to give this Colony an adequate supply instead of tinkering at the reservoirs in so dilatory a fashion that by the time an enlargement is finished Hongkong has quite outgrown the increased storage capacity. Has the European public been apathetic with regard to the water question? The subcussed in the organs representative of public opinion and among the residents themselves for years past, has been niluded to in numerous discussions on the state of Hungkong, and has been brought up at the Legislative Council by Unofficial members. It is true that there has been no public petition of the European community to water storage and supply. If this proves lack of hiterest, then the European residents lack interest in the matter. But it is evident that it does not prove that. A public petition such as that of 1901 is equivalent to a vote of no confidence in the Government, and as a commission of experts was appointed, after that petition had gone home, expressly to examine into the whole sanitary condition of the Colony, and as one of that commission's members did actually report on the question of the Colony's water supply, another petition should naturally be superfluous. It will readily be understood that the necessary increase of supply is not one that can be made at once. What we want from the Government is an assurance that extraordinary measures are being taken to hasten on a task of extraordinary urgency. We have received no such assurance, and in consequence the public | must begin to suspect the worst. That such a state of affairs is daugerous it requires no especial penetration to perceive. If the local authorities do not take the first possible opportunity of giving the explanation which is due to residents in this

OBSEQUIES OF LIU KUNG-YI.

Nanking, 16th November. It was most fitting that the foreign-consulin Shanghai should desire to show in more than usually open manner the respect they had for the dead Minister, and it was arranged, out of this expressed desire, the united Consular Body of Shanghai, together with representatives of the two foreign Municipalities and of the China and American Associations, should proceed to Nanking in a body on one of the occasions when, according to Chinese funeral ideas, it is becoming, and there personally show their respect. The commanding officers of the various navies having fleets in these waters also decided to take part and show their gratitude. These resulted in a gathering at Nauking on Saturday, the 15th of November, of a fleet and collection of foreign Consular officials which has never been equalled, and which it will probably be long ere it is excelled.

THE PLEAT. Before the data moutioned there had arrived off Nunking M.B.M. despatch boat Abscrity, the flagship of Vice-Admiral Sir Cyprist Bridge, K.C.B. in command of the China Station, and H.B.M. men-of-war Eclipse Bramble and Reserve. H.G.M.SS. Hansa and Secudier, the French mon-of-war Pascal and Décidée, the American oruiser Helena, the Austrian ironclast Kaiser Karl VI, Japanese, besides several Chinese men-of-war, and the Customs orniser Liu-Heing. Mr R. Munsfield, HB.M. Acting Consul-General at Shanghai came up on the Alacrity, while by various other vessels Mr. R. E. Bredon, Deputy Inspector General of Custonis, Mr. F. Taylor, Statistical Secretary of Customs, Mr. W. V. Drummond, and others from Shanghai had already resched this capital.

SHANGHAI'S VISITORS. Shortly after 7 o'clock the Chinese steamer Hacqu. Captain Wall too, which had been placed at the disposal of the Consular body, came into the harbour and made fast alongside the Government hulk. The party aboutd consisted of Dr. Knappe (who through the regretuble illuess of Mr. J. Goodnew, U.S. and Senior Consul, acted as doyen) M. Rutard, Consul-General for France, and his wife. Mr. von Hirsch and wife, Mr. Avocast, Consul-General for the Netherlands, and wife, Mr. Gottwald. Austrian Consul, and wife, Colonel Dignet (French) and wife, Mr. D. Sifferi, Belgian Consul-General, Mr. F. Hagberg, Swedish Consul-General, Dr. Barchet, U. S. A. Brunst, President of the French Municipality. Mr. J. N. Jameson, representing the American Association, Mr. C. J. Dudgeon, representing the China Association, and MM. Tillot and de Cordon.

Almost following the Hacan H. Italian M.' fine cruiser Lombardia, having on board Mr. E. Ghisi, representing His Majesty, came into harbour, and at 8 o'clock this vessel was saluted all the saluting men-of-war in port H.I.J.M's, ironc.ad Idrumi shortly followed the above named vessel, conveying Mr. Odagiri, Japanese Consul-General at Shanghei.

THE PROGRAMME. Shortly after the arcival of this party on the Haean, Mr. J. C. Ferguson, Foreign Advisor of H. E. Sheng, on behalf-of-the Viceroy (whose cards had previously been presented) arrived on boa d and explained to these official guests the arrangements regarding the various ceremonies, at the same time seeing to the distribution of the official invitations from H. E. the Viceroy to an entertainment in the These arrangement, included the reception by H. E. the Viceroy of the Naval and Military visitors at his temporary yamen at lu o'clock, the reception of Vice-Admiral Bridge and staff at 10.30, the reception of the Shanghai Cousular and Municipal Representatives at 11, and the return of the admiral's call at the British consulate at 11.30 and that of the Representatives at the Bureau of Foreign Affairs at 12 o'clock. RECEPTION OF ADMIRAL BRIDGE, Carriages were provided by His F.xuellency for all of his numerous guests, and this programme was punctually carried out. His Excellency, thouged vicercy Chang Chib-tung, received his guests with becoming dignity. accompanying them to the large gates of his yamen between files of well set up and sturdy looking, foreign drilled and armed soldiers standing at the present, with fanfares blowing. The Vicerov shows evident signs of age, his moustache and beard both being snow white, though his eyes still look sharply and searchingly into those of the person addressed, and he

It was currently reported during this visit that already H.E. has begun extending the system of roads, and that a section some few hundred feet in length was being built in a prest hurry in order to permit of hisbeing driven in his carriage to a temple which he was to officially visit on the 17th inst. THE EVENING RECEPTION.

"On Saturday evening His Excellency received. all foreign visitors to the Port, in the Military College. These guests included Vice-Admiral Bridge and his staff, the captains and officers of all the men-of-war in harbour, these including British, German, American, Japanese, Italian, and Austrian, besides officers from his own fleet, the Consular, Municipal and Commercial representatives mentioned above, besides tustoms officials and other foreign members of his Government. The entrance courts and the central hall of the College had been turned into a veritable crysanthemum show for the occasion, the central half containing an exceptionally fine mass of these beautiful blossoms. The large dass-room on the right was used as the reception-room, and there each of the gue-ts were presented to their host in turn, H.E. having a few appropriate words of greeting for each one. H.E. must have had a trying time considering his age, as he was kept standing for a full hour going through this ceremony.

THE BANQUET. At Co'clock sharp the guests were all lined up and followed their host across the central courtyard into the large hall on the left, which had been conver ed for the occasion into a very spacious banquet hall. Down the centre of this was a long table, with cross tables at each end. H.E. sat at the centre of the main table. with Admiral Bridge and Dr. Knappe as the senior naval and consular officials respectively. on each side of him. The military and neval officers of all nat onalities sat on one side of the table, consular officials and others on the other. The guests were thoroughly divided as nationality and the large number of Chinese high officials and interpreters, together with the consular representatives resident at Nanking, brought the number stated around the board to seventy-eight. The table arrangements had been made with considerable skill, while he decorations, principally composed of crysanthemum blossoms, added considerably to the beauty of the scene. The very large number of officials present, all in their very brightest costumes, made the scene an exceptionally brilliant one.

> TREATY OF SHANGHAI CRITICISED.

At the annual meeting of the American Asiatic Association, hold at New York on 17th October, President Silas D. Webb in discussing trade with the Far East, said the expansion had hardly come up to expectation, but this was partly accounted for by the continued unsettled political complications, and the steady drop in the value of silver, which has materially enhanced the cost of all imports. In his report to the same meeting, Secretary Foord adverted to the new Treaty of Shanghai and remarked :-- " The fact is not to be ignored that lekin stations do not exist as a fully developed system in North China, and therefore American trade suffers comparatively little from their exactions, while it would have had to pay its full share of the price demanded for their abolition. On the other hand, if the lekin'system is to continue in spite of the provisions of existing treaties, under which a surtax of 24 per cent, was accepted as a full equivalent for all international taxation whatever, there is every reason to assume that means might be found to make it imperative in the north as elsewhere. American merchants in China and the affiliated association in Shanghai do not believe. the secretary declared, "that the British treaty offers a full guarantee against such possibilities.

Tales of Hongkong in Verse and Story. By DOLLY. Hongkong, Kelly & Walsh, Ld. DOLLY," in the preface to his book, mentions that the contents will be to some extent familiar to local readers as having already appeared in | and bonus of 57 per share for the six months the Hougkong papers. We are sure that the volume will be none the less prized on that account. Dolly's knows Hongkong in all its moods. Perhaps he castigates with too stinging a whip sometimes, yet extenuation for two ponies, and was preceded and followed by tives had made the journey to Nanking. By that severity of treatment is to be found in the mounted bodyguard. After greeting all 9.30, the previously arranged hour, the Naval fact that the Hongkong epiderm is somewhat those as sembled. H.E. thanked them all most and Military officers, the Consular Body thick and callous. Dolly, however, is cruel only to be kind. He does not love the scourge for itself but rather for the possible good it may instil into the flagellated. The writen is bestknown here perhaps for his topical verses, in which he erinces humour and vicacity combined | enquired for at $17. Business in the northern with good rhyming abilities. In his prose period of informal conversation. Dr. Knappe the personal relatives of the dead Viceroy, was sketches, Dolly is no less happy. These are full expressed the hope that now that H.E. accorded them, and they walked in procession of living interest, embrace all types of story, grave and gay; and are marked by dramatic power and excellent narrative. There is a distinct excellence in The Steamer with the Buff coloured Funnel and For of Such is the Kingdom | and S64 (new). Ropes have declined to $120 of Heaven; while as a foil to these more serious | sellers. -Fenwicks have been booked at $49 and essays there are such pieces as The Collapse of the Housewife, which for farce and laughter ad of a long double line of youths, dressed in would be hard to beat. NEWS VIA AMERICA. THE SAMOA DISPUTE.

KING OF SWEDEN'S DECISION.

New York, 22nd October. King Oscar of Sweden and Norway has decided the Samoan controversy in favour of Germany. says a despatch to the Tribune from Washington. This fact become known on the return of Mr. Grip, the Minister of Sweden and Nerway, from a long visit to his home. Mr. Grip called at the State Department, but did not, of course, disclose the decision of his Sovereign, which must be presented simultaneously to the three-Powers concerned. The announcement will be astonishing to the Governments of the United States and Great Britain, which were confident that they would establish fully the legality and propriety of the joint landing of marines at Apia in 1899 to sustain the decree of the Samoan Supreme Court and end the revolution. The full scope of the arbitral decree of King Oscar is not yet divulged, and the extent to which i covers the claims for damages filed by the citizens of the three countries and of Franco may not be known for several days. These claims, which were nominally the prime cause for arbitration, are insignificant, however, compared with the question of national honour on which they depended and, if the action of the United States and Great Britain bad been sustained by the arbiter, would have fallen to The Samoan dispute grew out of the concertd action of Rear-Admiral Kauts of the United States Navy and Captain Sturdy of the British may in leading a combined Americ n and British force at Apia on April 1st, 1899, for the purnose of making a reconnaissance and breaking up Matanta's supporters, who were in rebellion against: the recognised Government. It was on this occasion that Philip Landsdale, the executive officer of the Philadelphia; Ensign J. R. Monaghan and two enlisted Americans, Lieutenant Preeman and two British sailors were killed. The United State ship Budger was promptly sent to the scene, carrying an international commission, composed of Bartlett Tripp. representing the United Stales, and Von Sternberg, the German Commissioner, and C. N. Elliott, the British Commissioner. Claims amounting to nearly $30,000 were filed by German, French, British and American residents on account of damages caused by the landing party. As the chief result of the Commission, the tripartite agreement of 1889 was abrogated, the islands being divided between the United States and Germany, while Great Britain withdrew. A Convention was signed at Washington on November 7th, 1890, sabmitting the claims of Samoan residents to the King of Sweden and Norway for arbitration, the main questions being whether the military action of the United States and Great Britain had been warranted Immediately the aggregate of claims, most of them German and American, rose to about $300,000. In July 1900. King Oscar consented. to act as arbitrator, and last spring the briefs containing the arguments on the main point at issuand the schedule of claims were submitted to him. Correspondence between the representatives of the three Powers in Apia at the time, as spread on the records, was extremely bitter and full of reflections on the integrity and honour of the nations concerned. The claims which are incidental to the large question were filed by citizens of the United States. Germany, Great Britain, France, Austria, Denmark, Sweden and Norway, Portugal and Switzerland, and natives of Samoa. Citizens of the United States asked for $17,605 to reimburse them for their losses in the bombardment subjects of Germany wanted $103,908; subjects of Great Britain asked for $6,285, and citizens of France $26,321.

CANTEEN REFORM IN THE UNITED STATES.

In his annual report of the Departments o the Colorado. Brigadier General Frederick Funston declares that the abolition of the conteen and the restriction placed on men returning from service are responsible for a deplorable increase among the troops of offences in general and of desertion in particular. He says that the recent anti-canteen legi-lation of Cong ess has lowered the discipline of the army. ruined hundreds of good soldiers, and enriched saloon-keepers, gamblers, and divekeepers, and dissolute women. The marked increase in the number of courtsmartial and a musry courts. the General declares, is directly traceable to the abolition of the canteen.

principal causes for this state of affairs: First. resentment of unaccustomed limitations and restrictions felt by men retarning from field service to the monotony and routine work of garrison life; second, the abolition of the caueen feature of the post exchange.

boundaries of various reservations; their proprietors, in almost every case, unprincipled scoundrels who leave nothing undone to debauch cases outside the limits of any city, the propriepolice regulations, and sell liquor regardless of hours and whether the buyer is already intoxicated or not. Gambling is universal in these dives and they are frequented by dissolute wemen. The soldier whose desire for a drink would ordinarily be satisfied by a few glasses of beer in the canteen of the post exchange goes escapes before he has spent or gambled away all MARINE IN UBANCES - Unions have sold his money, overstayed his leave, or engaged in an altercation.

into Persia. As if to accentuate the contrast which the spectacle of an ancient Asiatic monarchy in the last stage of decay is about to present to him. Baku offers him the spectacle of a young and progressive city in which the spirit of Western enterprise is far more conspicuous than perhaps in any other Russian city. Distinguished Russian writers like Prince Ukhtomsky, who claim for Russia a special mission in Asia, are fond of urging that in a certain affinity of race and temperament the Russian possesses peculiar qualifications for dealing with Asiatics which are denied to the Western European and not least to the Englishman. There is no doubt much truth in this contention. The most superficial observer who passes into Russia from Germany or Austria can hardly help feeling that, whatever the geographical text-book may say, when he has once crossed the Russian frontier he is no longer quite in Europe, though he is not yet actually in Asia. The comparison may seem paradoxical, but, to any one who has visited Northern China. "In my opinion," he says, "there are two Moscow itself, with its semi-secred Kremlin, in which the barbaric splendour of palaces and churches, stiff with gold and precious stones, has been accumulated for centuries to glorify the mystical association of spiritual and temporal sovereignty in the person of the Tsar, carries more than a suggestion of Peking and "Since this action was taken saloons of the its Forbidden City, sacred to the Son of Heaven, lowest type have been established just outside the | Even to the outward eye the view from the tower of Iwan Veliky over the thousand of coupoles and domes, gleaming with gold plates or painted in vivid tints of green and blue, and the soldiers and obtain their money. Just as there is no distinct line of demarcation drawn by nature between the Russian Empire in Enrope and in Asia, and the steppes of the Don and the Volya menge imperceptibly into the plains of Central Asia, so the Russian character seems to have passed through a series of subtle gradations from the Asiatic type out of which it was criginally evolved into a type which can no longer be called Asiatic, but which should certainly not be labelled as European. STRANGE STORIES FROM NORWAY: HOW THE PEASANTS EARN A

SIR HERBERT MAXWELL, BART M.P. (Author of "Merediana," &c.)

LIVING,

Take a Scottish small farmer or farm-labourer, Berwick, the shores of Solway, or where you more than 500,000 inhabitants.

among the children of men. Nowhere need at the present day the people do not drink, for the same and simple reason that cherubs can't sit down-they have not the wherewithal. A modified Gothenburg system has stamped out the vice by removing the temptation, or, at least, making it well nigh impossible to gratify the craving; and with the vice have disappeared most of those ugly blots which mar and impeded civilisation in other lands. Wives are not battered to death; horses have nothing to fear from the lash; poverty remains, it is true, but it is not embittered by close proximity to excessive luxury. The whole rural population -three parts of the community—is poor; but their poverty has not its source in the public-house; it is that noble poverty which conceives bu simple wants, and gratifies them by wringing subsistence out of a physical environment that would overcome any except a denntless race. So the poor man holds his head as high as his richer heighbour, who salutes the other as punctiliously as he does the English millionsire, who rents the sulmon-fishing, and is a source of such profit to the owner of carrioles, at is seldon, also, in Norway that poverty, even when extreme, assumes the complexion of squalor. Belles may be empty and backs but poorly clud, yet the house that shelters both generally has a trim, cheerful appearance, owing to material whereof it is built, and that which furnishes fuel for the hearth. The abundance of wood and the absence of coal, with its concomitant grime, tend to keep the aspect bright without and fragrant within. Wooden walls, resting on a stone foundation, is the uniform plan for houses great and small, and a hek of paint from time to time keeps these weathertight and cheerful to the eye. Wood is an excellent non-conductor, and as there is no stint of fuel these houses are warm in winter: but they are noisy dwellings; every footfall resounds through them. Rising at five this morning, stealthily, so as not to distarb the sleeping household, I was painfully aware that, in stamping into my fishing-boots. sent a reverberation from end to end the whole structure. Red-tiled roofs are the rule near towns and harbours, especially in the south; but towards the north, wooden l shingles are generally used, which sometimes get a cost of red paint, at other times are left bare, to assume lovely silvery tones from bleaching in the sun. The humbler dwellings are sometimes roofed with turf, which becomes perfect parterre of delicate and brilliant flowers. Yesterday half way up the Suldal, I saw a truly exquisite roof garden. A deep growth of moss, varying from rich reset to intense green, was half veiled by a purple mist of blossom, spangled with gold. The sun being behind the house, I was puzzled at first to identify the flowers, which had the appearance of raised embroidery upon dark velvet. Nearer inspection showed them to be those of a small wild pansy and scuttered plants of yellowhawkweed. One is accustomed to wonder at the elaborate and ingenious combinations in the flower-bods of London parks, but here was haphazard leveliness on the roof of this lowly mountain cot, surpassing the costliest efforts of the pardeners craft. Perhaps it is in the profusion and beauty of their wild flowers that is to be found the reason for the general neglect of horticulture by the Norse peasant farmers. It is the rarest thing possible to see any attempt at decorative gardening even round the houses of the wealth for farmers. In the cometeries, it is true, it is the custom to plant flowers. perhaps in traditional symbolism of resurrection; but nothing of the kind is done near the homestead. Then, all through the summer the woods are full of small fruitsblackterries, bilberries, cowberries, cranberries, raspberries, strawberries; higher up the hills you may fill your biggest baskets with the most delicious of all, the orange cloudberry; and therefore it is that nobody follows the example sometimes set by the purson of the parish, in growing cherries, plums, and gooseberries. The ntmost that is done is to plant a few appletrees; and these, at this present time of writing, are weighed down with ruddy fruit, Fruit farming is perhaps a trifle overdone everywhere at present; but certainly the favourable dimate. the extraordinary abundance of fruit produced under the prolouged sunshine of summer days, and the facilities for transport offered by the frequent stemmer service in the fjords, suggest that the Norseman might derive their share of profit from the industry. Leaving matter-of-might-be for matter-offact, it must be on med that the resources of the country are momore than to suffice the existing population, which has remained drains at the same figure, slightly over two mi liou, for a very long time, mpour a total area of 12 550) square miles. Many secured in the roomy wooden barns, the stress of of the men avoid the tedium of compulsory idlenation on the face of the earth than the Norse; work is past; but there still remains enough to ness in winter by going off to the North Sea occupy the day. The riverside ineadows have yielded their spoil, but the woodland glades und mountain lawns remain to be shaven, and this is done with scrupulous and minute diligence. By means of ministure scythes, every green thing is shorn close, and, where the sun comes not readily, is hung on what resembles a gigantic towel-horse, to be converted into what less of grass than lily-of-the-valley leaves; sprays of birch, ash, and rowan also serve their turn, cut and dried, to be mumbled in the dark of winter by the patient live stock. Even potato tops are carefully garnered for the same purpose; and, inasmuch as these are not full grown till early autumn when there is less sunshine. they require special care in preparation,

Primitive methods of culture suffice for the patches of potato, oats, and rye which constitute the entire arable effort on most of the farms. One seldom sees a " midden " or dungstead, such as is the glory of a Scottish steading; and although much of the land under cultivation. often composed of merely granite sand and therefore naturally poor, shows signs of extreme exhaustion, the owners generally seem indifferent to the virtues of minure. Hence some of the catfields contain as much poppy as corn. I could not but smile yesterday as I beheld the operations of a farmer proprietor of more ndvanced views. His was a good and substantial house, a fine verandah along the sunny front. and a broad expanse of meadow land stratching away to the Logen river. He sat in his ver andah in a wide-brimmed str.w hat, watching two lads who were manœuvring a cart in the meadow. In the cart was a tank, and a chance flow of wind wafted that to my nostrils which left me in no doubt as to what was in that tank. It was liquid manure of the most concentrated and overpowering aroma. So far so goot, from an agricultural point of view; the comic part was in the application of this fluid gold. The two lads each plied a utensit like a rather large breakfast cup, holding about an imperial pint, which they plunged into the tank, regardless of the appalling steach, immersing their arms to the elbows, and then scattered the contents on the grass. It seemed never to have occurred either to them or their employer (who was no doubt their father) how much labour might have been saved by using a larger vessel, attached to a long handle, and how much more economically the manure might have been applied in spring. Level instead of just as all growth was about to be stopped by the winter's snow. The corn harvest is of infinitely less moment than the hay crop to the farmers, small and large; but it is not less elaborate and picturesque, b cause although the grains may be poorly ripened and of indifferent quality, the straw grows long and rank in the heat and moisture of sheltered valleys, and it is of high value as winter fodder. Generally it is battered and twisted into an apparently hopeless condition by the August rains before it is nearly ready for the sickle: but the area under corn is seldom considerable, and long practice has made the husband nan skilful in reaping oats and rye under the mest adverse conditions. So far the operations have differed not at all from what may be witnessed on any Highland croft : now comes the picturesque feature which distinguishes the true Northlander harvest. Birches or young pines, ten or twelve feet high, having been felled in readiness, all the branches are topped off except those on one side, which are deft as pegs about six inches long. Then these poles are set up, and the sheaves are hing on the pegs, so that the little field assumes the aspect of a grove of golden columns at fair intervals. It is a method both, practical and scientific, for the grain is kept off the wet soil, and the sheaves are exposed to every breath of air and every ray of sunshine, but it would not serve the Scotland farmer's turn, by reason of the scarcity of wood in his country and the superfluity of wind.

The mention of wood brings us to a notable feature of rural life in Norway. Every farmer owns the land he tills, and always a good deal more that he doesn't till-uncultivable forest, to wit, whereon he relies to supply him with building material, with fuel, and often the main part of his income by sales to the wood merchant. Economically the system is a disastrous one. Every owner outs and carves his own portion of the great forest according to his fancy, without any obligation to provide or to protect young growth Anything marketable may be felled, and sent down the river to the sawmill or the shipper at the mouth. The great bulk of what is so disposed of consists of Scots pine of 40 or 50 years growth—almost the most valueles, timber that could be grown; for pine timber is not mature under from 7. to 100 years of age The pine sows itself profusely; there is no ground game except in "lemming years," to in erfere with its growta; but with the young pines, springs up a dense crop of birch and alder which are often allowed to oversladow and destroy the young pines. In many fine date, therefore, the pines have well nigh disappeared. and the mountain sides bear nothing but birch and alder, which, however beautiful to the eye IDENTISTRY. source of material wealth to individuals-immense in the aggregate—is herein neglected. Co-operati n between proprietors and the application of sound principles of forestry, would increase incalculably the value of this vast extent of natural forest, and it is difficult to estimate the return that might be secured from a for hundred weights of large seed sown on a m mustain side; for larch timber is not only of fer earlier market value, but when mature produces superior timber to the untive Scots pine. So much for the annimer life of the men of the fjords and dales, but how many of the irre-

A large proportion of the male population are affort at all times, for there are no more excellent seamen than the Norse. The United States Navy is largely manned from among them. Their splendid daring and steadiness at sea is the one trait by which we recognise the Viking of old in the Northlander of to-day. In ell else-in their gentleness, patience, courtesy, passes for hay. I have seen swathes containing | industry and temperance—they seem to present the very antithesis to those terrible pirates who swarmed across the North Sea in their black kyuts—they and their consins the Danes—laid heavy tribute upon all our coasts, held a great part of our land in thrall for three centuries. and left behind them memories of cruelty and rapine darker than anything else in our history. Yet there is scarcely any nation of Europe which has keptse pure in race as the Norse; for theirs is not a land either to brook invasion or invite immigration. It is a breading ground for heroes and harly colonists; those who stay at home perhaps the most contented community on earth; those who go forth to settle in other lands take with them that hatlit of thrift and homely austerity of life which sets a man far on the road to welfare.

Something for Mothers to Think About

EVERY CHILD born into the world with an inherited or early developed tendency to distressing, disfiguring humours of the skin, scalp, and blood, becomes an object of the most tender solicitude, not only because of its suftering but because of the dreadful fear-that the disfiguration is to be lifelong and mar its future happiness and promperity. Hence it becomes the duty of mothers of such afflicted children to acquaint themselves with the best, the purest, and most effective treatment available, viz., THE CUTICURA TREATMENT.

Warm baths with CUTICURA SOAP, to cleanse the skin of crusts and scales and soften the thickened cuticle, gentle anointings with CUTICURA OINT-MENT, to instantly allay itching, irritation, and inflammation, and soothe and heal, to be followed in the severer cases by mild doses of Curicuma Resol-VENT PILLS (see below), to cool and cleanse the blood, are all that can be desired for the alleviation of the suffering of skin-tortured infants and children and the comfort of worn-out, worried mothers. A single set is « Clen sufficient to cure when the best physicians fail.

Millions of Women Use Cuticura Soap Assisted by Cuticuma Cintment, for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, for common the scale of crusts, scales, and dandruff, and the stopping of failing hair, for toftening, whitening, and soothing red, rough, and sore hands, for baby rashes, itchings, and charlings, in the form of baths for annoying irritations and inflammations, or too free or of unelve perspiration, in the form of washes for ulcorative weaknesses, and for many examine, unitseptic purposes which readily suggest themselves to women, especially mothers, and for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and anysery.

CUTIOURA RESOLVENT PREIS (Chocolate Coated) are prepared to meet the wants of delicate women, and sensitive children, and are pure, sweet, and tasteless. They are beyond question the most successful blood purifiers and humour cures yet compounded. CUTHCURA REMEDIES are sold throughout the world. Australian Depote R. Towns & Co., Sydney. British Depote 37-28. Charterhouse Sq., London. French Depote 5 Rus do la Pain, Paris. Porrus Davo and Caus. Comp., Sole Props., Boston, U. S. A. "All about the Skin," free.

medicine of the kind, and surpasses averything hitherto abort time, often a few days only, removerall discharges from the urinary organs, effectually superseding injections, themse of which does irreparable harm by laying the foundation of stricture and other serious discases. In dysentery, piles, inflation of the lower bowel, cough, brotchitis, asthma, and some of the more trying complaints of this kind, it will be found astonishingly elicacious, affording prompt relief where other well-tried remedies have been powerless. THERAPION NO. 2 for imthe blood, scurvy, pimples, spots, blotches, pains and swellings of the joints, secondary symptoms, gout, rheumatism, and all diseases for which it has been too much a fashion to employ mescury, sarraparilla, &c., to the destruction of sufferent teeth and ruin of health. This preparation purificathe whole system through the blood, and thoroughly eliminates every poisonous matter from the body. THERAPION NO. 3 for exhaustion, impaired vitality, sleeplessness, and all the distressing consequences of early error, etcess, residence in hot, unhealthy climates, &c. It possesses surprising power in restoring strength and vigor to the debilitated.

THERAPION is sold by the principal Chemists and
